

FUNCTIONAL CAPACITY ASSESSMENTS

A Functional Capacity Assessment (FCA) evaluates a person's ability to perform tasks within and around the home and in the community.

WHAT IS AN FCA?

FCAs are typically for people facing challenges with performing or completing tasks around self-care, mobility, communication or other daily activities. Challenges may relate to intellectual disability; autism; neurological, musculoskeletal, congenital or degenerative conditions; the ageing process; or a traumatic brain injury.

This can include:

- Showering and other personal hygiene tasks
- Using stairs/steps
- Cooking and eating/drinking
- Moving around the home, yard or community
- Getting into and out of bed
- Social interaction
- Or any other daily task or activity.

- sensory profiles/needs
- communication
- social interaction
- learning
- self-management.
- cognitive functions
- physical functions, including mobility and/or motor skills
- assistive devices or technologies
